

Hello everyone,

I am Jayden Grieve, President of the Nexus publishing society.

So at most AGM's the president says that they're going to have short speech because they know it's boring, and then proceed to talk for two pages. This is my speech (show speech); it's barely half a page.

It has been a very smooth year for the Nexus, thanks ex-lax, the biggest change being the swap of positions between Greg and Jason. Greg is now the Managing Editor and Jason is now the assistant editor. As you can see Greg's beard has extended to match the wisdom he's gained. A round of applause for Jason and Greg please!

Some notes, we've put out 18 issues this year, which Greg's cardiologist informs me is the number of near heart attacks he's had, we had twelve different writers compose feature stories, which is 3 more than it took to write Black Eye Peas' "Imma Be", and our Two Spirits story, written by the talented Jillian Wedel, has received 2500 hits on our website which is the most we've ever have. Round of applause for Julian Wedel and the Black Eye Peas!

We also were the first school newspaper to post a story about the possibility of corruption in the CFS, and our also website received a something something pacemaker award for being filled with awesome stories!

I'd also like to take this opportunity to thank previous presidents Rachel Sovka and Christine Kumar, as well as my amazing board for contributing their time, and my mom for making me cheese cake every birthday.

Now without further audio, here's Greg with the weather.
