

The Speechus Succinctus

It's been a good year. We had a bunch of great hard-hitting stories. We looked into Camosun student's concerns about the school's disability services, we continued to investigate the tensions between the CFS and its BC members, we did student poverty, and we did drugs. Isn't that great we did drugs, that is investigated the illicit use of prescription drugs as study aids. Plus we had whole cocktail of other amazing stories, and I'd like to thank all the writers, because the paper literally won't write itself, and as much as I'd read a paper called Greg Weekly, that kind of defeats the purpose of a student paper.

I think that the paper remains a really import part of the colleges culture, and as an example of that we have been told that the college is actually using a couple of our stories to help them create policy.

I would like to thank Greg for his service, and assistant editor Jason Schreurs who has recently left us, but who will have a lasting impact on this paper. In Jason's absence we have been able to use the extra funds to purchase some much needed office equipment and hire two student editors, and next year we will be adding a third student editor to the team.

Finally I would like to thank the current board as well as Tori, Sara, Sera, who left earlier this year, and give an extra big thanks to Oryanna who has graduated and so won't be returning to us next semester.

Jayden Grieve, president, Nexus Publishing Society